COUNT TWO

(UN War Crimes – 18 U.S.C. § 2441)

March 2026 through April 2026, in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, defendant DONALD J. TRUMP did knowingly participate in and direct a widespread and systematic attack against the civilian population of Iran, including strikes on hospitals and schools causing great suffering, with the intent to terrorize civilians and destroy essential infrastructure vital to over 90 million people, constituting grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 2441.

Summary of Events in 2026

Crimes against humanity in the context of the 2026 Trump-led U.S.-Israel war against Iran primarily center on public threats by President Trump and senior officials to deliberately target civilian infrastructure and populations, which violates international humanitarian law. Trump repeatedly warned of bombing Iran “back to the Stone Ages,” destroying power plants, bridges, desalination facilities, and other essential civilian infrastructure vital for water, electricity, and daily life for over 90 million Iranians, while stating phrases like “a whole civilization will die tonight.” Such rhetoric and associated strikes on civilian sites (including hospitals and schools) have been condemned by Amnesty International, Human Rights Watch, over 100 international law experts, and more than 200 organizations as potential war crimes, crimes against humanity (widespread or systematic attacks on civilians), and even threats of genocide under the Rome Statute and Genocide Convention. Critics highlight the intent to terrorize civilians and cause irreparable harm as breaching the Geneva Conventions' prohibitions on targeting non-military objects and spreading terror, though the Trump administration has dismissed these concerns and framed actions as necessary military operations. Accountability remains uncertain due to U.S. non-membership in the ICC, but the statements have fueled global calls for investigation and individual criminal responsibility.

UN War Crimes:

The 2026 Trump-led U.S.-Israel war against Iran represents a clear violation of the United Nations Charter, most notably Article 2(4), which explicitly prohibits the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state, except in cases of individual or collective self-defense under Article 51 or with explicit authorization from the UN Security Council. Over 100 international law experts, including senior professors and former government legal advisors, have publicly stated that the February 28 strikes were launched without UNSC approval or credible evidence of an imminent armed attack by Iran, rendering the initiation of hostilities an illegal act of aggression that undermines the Charter's core principles of sovereign equality and peaceful dispute resolution.

In addition to these jus ad bellum violations, threats by President Trump and senior officials to deliberately target civilian infrastructure—such as power plants, bridges, desalination facilities, and oil wells—have been condemned as war crimes under international humanitarian law, breaching the Geneva Conventions' prohibitions on attacking non-military objects and inflicting collective punishment on Iran's civilian population, as warned by UN Secretary-General António Guterres and multiple UN special rapporteurs. Although the Trump administration has dismissed international constraints and framed the operations as defensive necessities, these actions have fueled global calls for UN-led investigations into accountability for breaching the foundational legal framework established to prevent aggressive wars.

Part 2: George Bush 2003 Iraq War, Including Halliburton, George W Bush, and Dick Cheney for the Iraq war in 2003 that killed over 80,000 U.S. Troops for Israel. <https://halliburton.com>
